

General Services Administration Federal Supply Schedules Contracts Summary

Overview U.S. Government clients can now access Jason Associates Corporation (Jason) through Federal Supply Schedules administered by the General Services Administration (GSA). The GSA has developed the Federal Supply Schedules to streamline the contracting process for Federal agencies. To qualify for a schedule, a company must have its capabilities and rates approved and verified by the GSA. Jason is approved by the GSA to provide Management, Organizational and Business Improvement Services (MOBIS), and Environmental support.

Understanding the Issues Federal agencies often require specialized support on short notice to address changing and evolving mission activities. When existing contract vehicles do not provide the needed expertise, the GSA Federal Supply Schedules provide a convenient avenue for accessing needed expertise and services. Federal agencies placing task orders against the GSA MOBIS Contract or GSA Environmental Support Contract are not required to synopsise requirements, seek further competition, or make time consuming determinations of fair and reasonable pricing -- the GSA has already completed those actions for companies listed on the Federal Supply Schedules.
